What are Alstroemeria?

Alstroemeria are sometimes called Peruvian Lilies. They are very versatile plants and will grow in different situations.

The tall variety of Alstroemeria, are great for the back of borders or for allotments. They will provide a continuous supply of excellent cut flowers throughout the year.

The medium height variety, for example, the 'Inca' collection are slightly shorter but will also provide long enough stems for cut flowers. They are also good for borders and can thrive in large containers.

'Little Miss' 'Inticancha' and 'Colorita' collections are shorter, sometimes dwarf Alstroemeria. The shorter collections are excellent to keep in pots on your patio, or they look great at the front of borders.

Some companies sell loose roots (rhizomes), we never do this as the results can be unpredictable. Our plants come in 9cm pots with an established root system – the result of micro-propagation, and such travel well and race away once planted.

CARING FOR ALSTROEMERIA

On arrival, remove your plants carefully from the packaging, water them well either from above or by standing them in water. But do not leave them in water for more than a couple of hours. The best thing to do with your plant which is currently in a 9cm pot, is to repot into a larger 15cm (2 litre) pot and allow it to grow for a further 8 weeks before planting it out.

When potting, mix fertiliser into good, fresh multipurpose compost. Put some of this mix into the bottom of the new pot and place the well-watered plant onto it. Put more compost around it. The compost should finish level with the top of the root ball (1-2cm below the rim of the new pot). Water it lightly but frequently and keep it in a warm, sunny position for up to 8 weeks until the roots have reached the bottom of the new pot.

When planting in the ground, mix fertiliser and organic matter into the soil – bone meal or blood fish and bone are good. If the soil is dry, fill the empty hole with water and leave it to drain. Place the plant in the hole, filling around it with the soil mixture. Firmly with your hands, or a lightly applied foot, pat the soil down around the plant. Water occasionally and thoroughly for up to 3 months, until the roots are established.

All of our Alstroemeria are winter hardy; however, you should mulch well for the first few winters to ensure that the plant is well established and can get through the winter on its own. Free-draining soil is essential. Deadhead by pulling up the flowering stem, ripping it from the ground – this encourages the plant to re-flower.
